

Kind words by ex-students
courtesy of Friendster.com

Melissa, 10/25/2003:

Nisar :) He is the sweetest person that one can ever know. Just love this guy. he is awesome and he is just like a perfect friend that one can have. his wisdom is amazing but yet, he is ever so humble. Nisar's the man :)

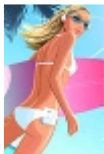

Dong, 10/21/2003:

Nisar, as part of our deal requires me to call you. Helped me with a school project through email. Haven't actually talked to him face to face, but heard about what a wonderful lecturer he is from seniors. Nice person, loves prata.

Jiayan, 10/16/2003:

this is the boss who gave me my one & only AD that's on my transcript! =P & he's the one who just 'rescued' me by allowing me to interview him for my overdue online journ assignment. what will i do without you, boss? haha! this is one intelligent & talented guy who is busy for every second of the day. thanks for everything, boss! =)

Ashlynn, 10/06/2003:

i have a confession to make - i wish i had paid more attention in Mr K's class. it's not that i'm sleeping or distracted or anything. it's just that i'm having too much fun! Mr K's one of those remarkable teachers who can make a subject as boring as making a website to a class that i just can't miss. this guy rocks man... can't wait to have you back in Singapore

Zaki, 10/04/2003:

It's THE MAN... THE MAESTRO... of the IT world!!! Yo Mr K., I'll always remember the times when you put up with my class's idiosyncracies hahaa... I'll always appreciate your style of teaching... Very out of the box style... Not the typical/average pragmatic/linear style (read: Singaporean education)... I'll appreciate also your honest comments on my works :) p.s. got lobang for webdesigning that will help me top Bill Gates's salary points? hahaha~

Eunice, 10/02/2003:

Hahah I can see you've caught onto the Friendster fever. The creative forum was hilarious, esp that Funky presentation, haha. But honestly, I think Mr K. has his heart in the right place and a whole load of wit to match. Speaking about places, we wonder where he's globetrotting off to next ;-)

Vanessa, 10/01/2003:

MR.K! He will grudgingly admit we are his favourite class! He's a really nice guy with a neat approach to teaching us how to use software. Given our limited skills and patience, I think he's done an excellent job! Look at our blogs and webbies!

Sarah, 09/29/2003:

mr k is one of the best teachers I had in mass comm! wait, I don't think we should even call you a teacher. you're our friend!! =) about this guy, I bet you didn't know he wrote for the Sydney Olympics way back yar? a truly talented and humble person, he is one guy you would want to keep in touch with!

Andrea, 09/29/2003:

Heart of epic proportions. Check. Insatiable desire for challenges. Check. Imperative need to see the world. Check. But it still takes more than any of that to be messing with what he is messing with. A warm sensitivity with matching wit, we wonder why he is still single.

Benedict, 09/29/2003:

I can honestly say that this guy made me look at the web in a whole new different way and also made me appreciate web design a lot more. His teaching methods are pretty effective I must say, he doesn't spoon feed the student but encourages them to think, to find solutions to their own problems instead~ fantastic guy, I must say that he made studying web design so much more bearable! I would have died otherwise lol! rock on Mr K! you the man! saxophonically~ ben :D

Amy, 09/29/2003:

"Good stuff." That's what Mr. K always says to me. =) Enjoy the exchanges of ideas whenever we do get to talk on MSN. I always learn in every conversation with you... =) Thanks!

Xiao Wen, 09/29/2003:

```
<html> <head> <title> Friendster - Add Testimonial </title> </head>
<body> He taught me HTML. </body> </html>
```

Lydia, 09/28/2003:

he's the TECH guy, you dont' see his face much, but you'll never ever forget him coz he'll haunt you with countless emails on [fmslist]... and he's forever online.

Joey, 09/28/2003:

my role model!! uber cool, globe- trotting lecturer/webdesigner/farmer/fill-in- the-blank person who doesn't know what stop is. :P